Article's emphasis is placed on the consequences from the rapid development of the economy after the Industrial Revolution. It reveals and discusses the problems related to this process which are causing global warming and are making scientists talk of a new geological era called the Anthropocene. Although not in historical order but in ontological this article is showing the gradual genesis of the ideology of the environmental movement from the middle of 20-th century and the work of few environmentally orientated organizations which are trying to protect the nature. In the #DecadeofAction it is also giving strategies, solutions and precise structure of the most important problems standing before humanity.
